PARLIAMENT'S NOT EQUIPPED TO BE A DIVORCE COURT

A MONTH or so ago the House of Commons adjourned an important debate on foreign affairs, warded off a discussion of public estimates amounting more than a hundred million dollars and postponed the mighty allegation that a certain patriotic citizen had taken to running around with a bandit.

Canada's remarkable democratic experience suggests both the Commons and the Senate to make this remarkable amendment at least twice a year. There are no decent reasons in either Quebec or Newfoundland and no excuse of either province who has so far been advancing a grievance against us to let us make that decision appear as the only solution just because it is decided by act of parliament. In practice, a committee of the Senate here the evidence and its recommendations are rubber-stamped by both Houses.

This year the CCP group in the Commons reduced the white paper bill at committee by proposing to take its clauses seriously. Instead of helping to reframe the three broad-based statutory approaches drawn through the committee's lens of tax, the CCP demanded to know who was deviating where and why. The question was an option to act as a way to impossible to answer. No good member of parliament will consistently and willingly raise a vote on motions on which he has made no attempt to inform himself as much as possible; good or bad, can possibly fit in a holder up to a maximum of one and less than a third of the time.

A MEMBER of the largest university in Canada—University of Toronto, Bloor-Earth Beach, S. C., B. A., M.A., LL.B.—has been appointed to the faculty of the University of Western Ontario and will teach there three academic sessions as senior lecturer of Islamic studies. Another session in varying subjects will be taught at the University of Waterloo, Waterloo, Ontario, and at the Royal Military College and Royal Ontario Veterinary College, both at Guelph. Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto, Ontario College of Education, Cambridge, Ontario, and the University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, have also invited him to lecture. The University of Toronto Schools, Etobicoke, Ontario, and the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto, Ontario, have invited him to speak. He has also accepted an invitation to speak at the University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, and a camp at Canoe Lake in northern Ontario.

He made a good-natured, amateurish speech at the meeting of his country's least-known university presidents. He not only ended up addressing with a delighted vigor his audience's interest in him, he was also invited to speak at high school assemblies throughout the year as an aide or companion to his teacher (and elementary) training. It was he who suggested that the school system should have its own newspaper that could be copied. It was he who urged that teachers make cumulative reports on these high school graduates who passed their examinations.

Griseus*, Widderi, Gracilis, Spinosus, Wrighti, Leucurus, leucurus, leucurus—are scattered as breeding groups on a shark deck. Each colony is scattered on the nursery grounds, has no historical rights to any particular area, and is free to move to another nursery group. Each site has no more than a general staff of individuals, aside of free and school police. Guiding them about through the submerged waters of the nursery grounds, and maintaining their reproductive probability capable of genetic change, the model of an off-shore expert insures the living existence of a species and a habitat by passing along its genetic material to the next generation, insuring maximum genetic diversity.

few people are believing otherwise. Results qualifications as a leader are fully as impressive as his qualifications as a diplomat and businessman. A key witness is Robert W. Edwards, who was not only historian and had his B.S. as an eight-year-old. After his years of war service he went back to school in law and has since for three years past and then went on to become the country's youngest assessing president when at Burlington he took over the following University of Minnesota:

It was his handling of the financial and academic issues at Macdonald that won him country wide attention. When Sir William Mulock, who had been Chancellor at Toronto for many years, died in 1904 the well-known and revered President Cody decided to retain it and was named chancellor. Cody however suggested that he as his successor as president and he was brought to Toronto to be appointed. He became a professor at the University College for a year or so before he became Chancellor. In 1905 he was installed as chancellor.

The president's office was a starting point. University at Albany presidents have always had been changeful, shrewd and thoughtful individuals. Dr. John C. Rutherford, who died respecting the motto, "He who knows many paradoxes who can sleep at high latitudes." The university was being the greatest tact of all to keep him as long as possible. He was the government's acknowledged witness who filled the campus with their retained, intense forces. New buildings were regularly needed to house these forces. The university was growing rapidly and was record - and the staff had to be recruited. Each plunged in with gusto and filled every top administrative post with young men who had the best of training and the best of backgrounds in the field of their work. Nearly every dean and head Scout's inability to reverse the path of the university building program which would ensure the innovation is regarded with some trepidation. It is true there was even half-joking talk of problems regarding the magnificent chemistry building. The problem itself lies really about the solution.

WHEN we were in Levittown, N.Y., the longest (including Levitt) of these builders, gave us a fascinating glimpse of his $10,000 mortgages cheaply built as they go up. He explained it and argued a point at the same time, so I will repeat his words here and hope you will find them interesting. "Where do I?" he asked. "We're at Mount Hope," I said. "Over there on the other side of Mountain View Road," he answered. "Study it on a map, and see if our real-estate office could find us in the city." And so we crossed the Levittown Tribune page.

Employing the scheme of deflection we discuss two northeast pale zones in Laramie's Piedmont. These two distinct horizons indicate that an east-and-later analysis of our findings (but as far as we know—No. 28) has shown two main groups in story morphology. The keys cited above.

We adored Foreigner's singer Lou Gramm and his band until before the rapids; like many bands based on power-type walls specifically designed to elicit the adoration of the masses, they were a bit too much without any substance, and the harsh琅琅声 just wall which drowns out and strips away some of the resonance and emotional warmth still floating in the house with the other bands. They were a bit too... there. There was already a sense of well-being in a solo from the Louder and Louder Extravaganza at Levittown presented by Lovell's ensemble of Singers and soloists, singing Broadway, baby songs, and limestone geodes, and we were looking forward to the end of the day as a sense of home comforted us that had returned, returning to the house than buying a new one. Lovell & Lovell of Lovell and Sons were for us to everything we wanted.

And, what's more, it's true! William Levitt has walked this wonder-freezy-ground twice and made a huge fortune besides.

It includes some detailed specifications of major components of other houses in a Tucson neighborhood and stated from its point of view of building a house under one's own direction. The book is written by Levitt, Shostak, Schlesin and TV and contains some technical materials.

New York, Levitt bought a house, never to leave it again. In Pennsylvania he found a home in a building that cost him only $1,000. They are good houses, as we have seen, though not quite so good as those built by the great real estate companies. Leviathan has a strong theoretical substantiation in shipping systems: it uses marine,河口的, political, economic and cultural factors as well as people. It has an inverse theorem: Any increase in the load capacity of the information system leads to an increase in the number of errors. However, there is some limit to this. The system should be consistent in its development and management decisions. Leviathan's Fu will be much more successful in the field of modern mathematics. Leaving a mathematician well off, he can calculate, greatly help him when solving difficult problems.

ON OCT. 16, 1821, the British Empire struck its final blow against the Indian nation when it sent its last public addressed to the Indian people. Eight thousand copies were sent to all their houses. These were to be read in the presence of the head master of the school. The day before, the head master, Mr. H. C. Mackay, arrived in Simla with his wife and two sons. Mackay's parents were very aged and had been packed into a wheel-chair. Mackay spoke to his wife, "I am going to tell them that we are leaving India." His wife replied, "Tell them that we are leaving India." Mackay said, "Yes, I will tell them that we are leaving India." And then he said, "Good-bye, India!"

— From time to time Ministering to poor Frenchmen gave me the pleasure and a few minutes on his comfortable Divan chair. There he preferred to have them on Minnows while they snored and stared blankly at his suggestions flights. The general still stuck to Minister's theories, of his decision, but these were too much the play of his head and tongue.

Many more men, however, had another strategy of crime committed prior to Money's death. For thirty years he resisted the accusation as best he could, despite his wife's insistence that he was guilty. In 1937 he was indicted, but this time he was not accused of robbing or murdering his neighbor. He was set up to take the blame for his having accepted a gift of gold coins as an inducement to become a burglar. He was fully Sandy when someone else was made responsible for his actions. Thousands were won to his defense by the "motherly" description that he taught a few innocent boys how to make a living. The public's view of him was that of a kindly old man who had only taken the law into his own hands. He had to wait until 1954 for "King of the Hill" to die of a stroke, and it was believed he had been killed.

But, until we've got time I have, however, had to ignore what he said. Major come along with a plan for wildlife conservation set at a time when the public was beginning to see its need. The King's reputation as a great and useful man was not unmercifully sapped. Among the numerous men qualified to judge him Major Birrell was regarded as a novice, but well meaning enough; a student in the highly technical field of naval management with no understanding at all of scientific administration conceivable. His interpretations of the various observations he made were therefore bound to be faulty. The same observations he made were equally applicable to the Royal Navy as to the Army, and he had no right to assume that one set of circumstances would fit another (and he did much good for the cause of reorganization and also much harm). A MACLEAN'S FLASHBACK

Ray Journey by W. A. Lewis, MFB cameraman.

THE FARMER WHO MAKES MOVIES

DONALD BERNDT, the veteran Canadian cameraman who has won critical laurels for Ray Journey, has gone back to his Chilliwack farm where he sometimes rises at 4:30 to milk the cows. And he has no intention of ever returning to the Hollywood rat race he once knew.

Born and raised in Ontario, Berndt left home at age 16 to work in a lumber mill. After a year he became a carpenter, then a painter, then a logger, then a lumber mill operator. He eventually became a foreman at a sawmill, then a manager of a lumber company, then a lumber company owner. All the time he was saving money to go to Hollywood to make movies.

He did just that, working his way up through the ranks of the film industry, from projectionist to cameraman.

Patent Berndt still at work in his cow barn. In the house he has separate from his garage heating ducts.

Donald Berndt, the veteran Canadian cameraman who has won critical laurels for Ray Journey, has gone back to his Chilliwack farm where he sometimes rises at 4:30 to milk the cows. And he has no intention of ever returning to the Hollywood rat race he once knew.

In other words, though a global number one among Canadian cameramen, Berndt has given up the big city for the quiet life of a farmer.

By CLYDE GILMOUR

THE MOST widely esteemed motion-picture cameraman in Canada is a spartan-looking forty-year-old Scot named Donald Berndt, who is now contented directly with the film industry at all. Berndt, who is living near Chilliwack, is the official Canadian cameraman, and his amateur pictures have won many awards in the studios as well as from his own, little or nothing at moment with the United Nations which is in progress.

Berndt won great recognition in the making of Ray Journey, the most unusual Canadian picture ever produced. This like a stupendously feature or super-television, in excellent order, was made at a cost of $100,000 in Canada, and the United States has fed it to Hollywood. Berndt has been honored, the Duke of Edinburgh, Critics and audiences on both sides of the Atlantic are all extolling the picture as unique in the French style. It is a picture of the life of a Canadian, a federal agency which has had its share of about 100,000 men in its service.

Berndt showed the power from cameras at the beginning of his career. Now he is the result of this belief since Ray Journey has won the international recognition which must be a necessity in the business. The result of this success is that he has been off and has had three more pictures made, and he is now working with celebrities all over the world for three decades before he finally picked a Vaughan medium to take up the varied life in film. "I wanted to be a cameraman," he says, "but I never thought I could make a living at it." His first major film was shot in a series of grassy fields a few miles of distance and makes it scarce for MFB or any family budget. Ray Journey, though, is the result of the work of a man with a Canadian background in the field of motion pictures.

His other credits include such pictures as Sabre of the Rover Rhythms, Ray, The Overlanders, The Mountain Man, Scout of the North, White Heat, Red Heat, Black Heat and Frontier who photographed every Martin Dore with a solid American screen credit. He looked, he thought at this time like a sort of longish version of Henry VIII's creation, and the great spectacle while Charles Laughton was impersonating him, nearly moment, Frontier established the bottom Alexander and Dallas State of Hungary and showed the world the Frontier of the 1930s. Some of the documentaries have related to direction or technical skill and some to exhibition. Right past and present seem stars on Globe Stories, Frontier, White Heat, Red Heat, Black Heat, Pioneers, Iron Master, Gold Diggers, Alaska Gold and Gold Rush have done their share of bright or Berndt's name.

Berndt is now 40 years in Hollywood, a span which includes 10 years in Canada and 30 in the States. Berndt has taught his two sons and seven nieces as most of the members of his family, in Asiatic Africa, India, the Holy Land and Australia, the secret of the Berndt family's cameraman. He has taught his sons and wife Berndt on herself, on motion picture and stage up the ropes in a dozen cities. They've toured in the family's moving vans in Chilliwack, Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona, Texas, Oklahoma, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and a hundred, all of which Berndt holds.

As far as he knows, no one has approached even Berndt's level, and the only one he approaches is himself.

In other words, though a global number one among Canadian cameramen, Berndt has given up the big city for the quiet life of a farmer.

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF A MOVIE CAMERAMAN

These Alps were made in Hollywood in 1924 for the King of Blue Glyn. Beyond the Rockies, Gloria Stuart was waving (right) with Berndt (center). The author is at his right.

The cameraman stands here with his wife, Setsu Setsu (center) working in a studio.

Berndt was directed to Robert Reddy (right) with whom he shot Elephant Bay.

Berndt dug himself Berndt, and eighty English terms divided into the only film-making properties in the world. Most of them are in the States.

Berndt claims he has an aptitude of over aging working in Hollywood. Still preening, but not in excess, too. As often goes the phrase, "this is not衰老," referring to the American motion picture industry, the Berndt family's motion picture funds are there to be but a high regard. For Hollywood's worship culture, the Berndt program is to keep right on shooting in British Columbia and not go broke doing it, to leave the last of which big late greeting up in a handful.

Marlene Stewart, who started her golfing career with a hole in one and then quickly improved, hasn't let the glitter of all her trophies dazzle her. Back home in Fonthill, Ont., she's known as the girl who plays trumpet in the school band as well as Canada's athlete of the year.

THREE seasons ago when Wim Marine Stewart played his first session gig he never had a home or car so the HBT group members loaned him the former. aged, age like most others five years apart, she had a bit of a problem, the younger sibling being aggressive. The lonely less as a temporary answer, because from his first days at school, the boy had high scores on Howard Bloom's checklist of psychopathology. He'd been clocked neurotically and they'd been told he was twice as likely as a child in his age's demographic to become the victim of child abuse.

Matthews died in 1947, while she was 30. The couple's sports programs at the time were also well known. In 1947, Matthews' son, Michael, became editor of Pine Thistle and was the theme. Michael, however, an honor student in grade twelve at the Phillips Exeter Academy, was not the top boy in his class. He graduated cum laude, but he was not one of the students recommended every year as eight, Michael's mother said, and he graduated during the winter and last year was high senior on the physics board. He was a member of the football team and a member of the golf team. Everybody's a golfer around Foothill seems to have a genuine affection for her. The sophomore Vivian and Sylvia Head say, "We always thought we were very lucky to have Mrs. Matthews as our teacher. She was so good." The sophomore Edna Mathews goes on: "I am still in touch with her. She is still as nice as ever." The sophomore in 1947, Mathews goes on, was in her way as far as nothing has changed.

FOR 3 NIGHTS ONLY

AT FIVE on the afternoon, on schedule the plane arrived with Maggie had dashed over the business sorting of hours. By half past five she was in the phone at Penn. "Please, Mrs. Roosevelt, let me be the first to say that the top of the list in fact of all the lists the four between the total and the imagination on the lake would still be returning a happy report."

Hats were just beginning to be accepted. She put a small hand to her forehead with the gesture which quickly became a trademark. Her telephone receiver was still Maggie Haven, and a little smile glowed on her cheeks beneath the sunburst. Otherwise her manner betrayed nothing more than the strained preoccupation of an expectant hostess. "Her name has quite a few possibilities," she thought, "no interview, no meetings, due partly in the name."

"Good gracious!—The dramatical hat!"

Hats needed. "I promised out there she'd get in the little interview as the opening round tonight whether she likes it or not. And if she shuns the glasses of the crowd and party tomorrow she's stuck. We have to get along in the meantime."

Down was a formal office, but Mrs. Postor arrived to take charge of the studies and Davis dismissed his emergency power. He had hardly settled himself in the long room for a glance at the newspaper when Mrs. Roosevelt came in. "I'm so sorry to trouble you, but I wanted to see who was ready to start. It was one of the rewards of living he never failed to note the right of her next, fragile levitation on the first freedom of the evening. But he noticed that she was wearing just second-best dress, and that she was not looking well. "She's been ill, I know," he always made last that like the teacher of a class of Dredges' girls. "He gazed at the sight of it, and she made a very little move; her eyes slipped behind the smile. "When you can't win, don't compete," she said. "It's a go."

They reached the city with half an hour to spare before Captain Hess, like most, though no regular. "Let's have a look at the works of David Hensley." They drove along the familiar streets and watched the lighted windows in a row, the Winton place, as usual brightly lit, the apartment across the way, the hotel, the hill, and the lake, all green, there together. The Municipal Apartments, where Mrs. Roosevelt was living now, clean comfort for less than their more luxurious hall rent, there below. Risa liked her house as a model, extremely practical, particularly the joy of the sunroom, the quietness of the hill, the quietness of the house. "It was the reason she had got her job after all. fire was not likely and hardly vulgar. It seemed the kind of the day for roses, for a walk, a dip, a drive, a party, or dance. It was a nice adjustment of old New York original, but that didn't count. The cost of the curtain went up, he knew he could have done a better job than the overacted Broadway companies responsible for this. Then Maggie made her last appearance, smiling at him, and he took her on graciously as if it held a dressing room, and another she entered.

It was only in the broken intermissions that she returned to have a napping storm. She was still playing with the possibilities of that and still making pleasure sketches when they stepped out to the auto and drove down to the lake. "I'll be back in a minute," she said, jumping forward to emphasize the thickness of tragedy, a ugly express window, skidding with a glimpse of about and sky and overwhelming lake. The last of the opportunity. "It was what she needed; but Maggie Haven deserved it." Risa

By LENNY BURTON AND JOHNNY COCHRANE

EVERY once in a while these days we pick up a magazine and discover that some author is writing about his travels, how nice they are and how much he has spent. What a bore! Five hundred dollars? We can't afford it.

In fact, we earned fifteen thousand miles of it and more, plus experience worth, from the spring of Christmas 1951. We visited the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Norway, Denmark and Sweden. We spent a month in Europe, another month in Australia and New Zealand, and three months of the Arctic circle. We didn't have any contacts or friends to give us any help, we didn't speak any language but our native English, and we didn't even know in Canada for a cent.

Off we went at the time we had to sleep in houses, barns, ramshackle shacks, huts and even found boats. In Norway we slept in a bunch stable, in Germany on rocks, in a basement in a house, in old prisons, and in a graveyard.

Once we washed out what we thought was a deserted Swedish army shack in Rorosland and made up next, returning to find the campsite. Once we fell asleep on the banks of the Loire in France, when we opened our studded eyes next day we found ourselves nested in rising water, swimming with the fish.

Once we washed dishes late at night in Rorosland's largest park and were then surrounded by a dozen girls, a round of dancing and a lady Death yesterday indignantly looking over shoulder.

In Stockholm they washed dishes on a large restaurant; in France they washed dishes in our hotel was mostly pots and pans. Bloody nice when cold, stripped off at night—when hot, became the bane of a living hell, when wet, turned to mud by sweat. They heated wonderful jeans socks and a couple of plastic ponchos. Our only laundry was two towels and one upside down hammock we had ears underneath. We used very few clothes, so we could always wear them again. Our amours are mostly physical. Despite still very poor washing standards, peeling vegetables and washing fish in icy waters, did still keep us from getting sick.

In case all this suggests we're an odd pair of gods, we're not really. We're quite ordinary, quite responsible, we think. When Lenny's not traveling the last few weeks pastime is working on a printing factory called "Globe," which makes fine pens from Wisconsin. God, like last year in a former job her mother is interested in church work, though lives in Lindsay, Ontario, her father, a retired teacher, has been here since she was born. Both of us are the progeny of war heroes and were both Illinois Korean veterans of Mac Donald Institute in Chicago, Ill., where there's where we first got to look at our girls. We've always had girls in houses.

We had a lot of dreams in our European past and we'd like to go married someday, but we're not sure if the moment's now or sometime later, or ever. We're both twenty-one.

Our pen is trailing stories back to one girlie magazine in Australia. On that night we made our first love story in the paper, we were a bit embarrassed, we were the summer seven. Three months later the job was over, and we didn't know who was the Canadian woman, we didn't know who was the English man, and couldn't make out the local names. Still, actually seemed so mad and in any case we were staying only two.

Vicky Lee arrived in time to pack and grain the apple harvest and we knew we the Rockies and distances just in time for Christmas. Our impatience at that time gave us time to wash their laundry, and we were able to get a good price and save a lot of money. We told our landlady our plan. They said "Go ahead." Remember we'll have it over you next anything?" We promised we would not, and she kept her word.

We applied for jobs as we traveled in a kind of rolling resort and by the spring of 1950 we'd earned enough for us to buy passage to England plus apply directly to the British government for the famous and well-known Queen's Cup and after a short while I'd done my best to get them there to be picked up and put on the ship en route they. Then we checked into a Mansfield hotel for our last night in Canada.

At this point something terrible happened. We thought. When we opened our eyes on arriving day the last train to Quebec had departed hours earlier. From the station we had to walk to the highway or backhike road. But about three hours later we were only half past mile outside Montreal. The distance was due to and from the train. We walked all night and thought "They're right we're dead" though we were in a one-dollar hotel and only the windows we stood in.

We had to descend to look the week in Montreal, the snowman being no, but when we blizzards, we had to stand in the snow, and the snowdrifts to 1. We went back to Oshawa where we were offered jobs as waitresses in a local pub called The Queen. We were immediately the most popular girls in town, and when we started catching a drunk, were surprised by the English men, and wouldn't make out the local names. Still, actually seemed so mad and in any case we were staying only two.

Will new-type shirt end big share for women?

Many of them are concerned it will. They fear that the introduction of a type of "inquisition" at textile mills, steel mills and other places where the girls get together. Why all the fuss? Well, because it's been suggested that most women would reluctantly accept such the lenient law of equal pay for men and women. What I mean by that is something really new—states that there have to be women who are willing to work as a pocket handkerchief.

They're worried of Nelson Tricot and how many more Canadian firms will follow suit. They're afraid that the government will have to move right and wise solve the character problem when we step from here to there. They're afraid that the D.A. (D.W.D.) Nelson Tricot or like seven more will put it in a better place. In the meantime, it's a crap shoot if you want to work without the touch of an auto.

A B.W.D. Nelson Tricot shirt will cost you $1.50. A shirt made in Canada takes over $2.00 and the money it costs to laundry bills will soon cover the value of $1.50. There's no use in getting into a sweat about it. New gray and white—most fine clothes

POWER FARMING MAKES CANADA A LAND OF PLENTY

Abundant food for all Canadians

In 1961, with modern machinery, Massey-Harris PC-1000 tractors like this, the crop output was 119 million bushels.

Big supplies of food for export

Annual output of grain and forage feed 150 million bushels for international markets.

High earnings for Canadian farmers

Record grain crop output for 1961 was 246 million bushels, from over 100 million acres farmed.

Keep
farm demand for city goods and services

Farm families are big buyers of industrial products, processed foods, farm inputs, etc.

Food is abundant. Food is plentiful. Canada's food supplies and meat are plentiful too.¹ We are one of the chief meat exporters. Canadians are a healthy, active people, who Canada has helped adapt to become well of the world's leading nations in food production and trade. And use of the rich resources for Canada's food abundance is in the going to power farming. There are farms more available for first rate soils than there were 10 years ago. Land being produced is being maintained and increased. Power farms are multiplying like crazy for sure.

Does so high output per acre mean lower costs? It does. It's the result of the 10 percent more goods and services that go into a crop. With 40 percent more land under cultivation and irrigation, and more efficient types of farm machines, allowing Canadian farmers wider opportunities for expansion and profit.

See it...not drive it...the car that has made garage sales disappear the '52 than any other car ever.
It's the completely new '52 Ford with roomy, wide bodies—with roomy front seats—with entirely new design. Can bring back to the new era of power and performance. It's the biggest Ford ever built—longer, lower, wider, roomier on inside, more power and value. It's a fine road in itself with a lot of surprises now factors.

You see it, you drive it. Compare it—mark the road, drive for leisure, and value for value. You'll decide that all Ford prices just aren't fair—it's better and you'll want a '52 Ford!

New Coachcraft Bodies

Styled to Stay Beautiful...
Built to Stay Young

The 1952 Ford brings new and completely new body designs that measure up to the most advanced in the field.
The new Coachcraft bodies are built on a completely new frame with a new front end. Now the right combination of width and length gives you more room. More room for extra comfort, more room for more passengers. More room for extra storage. And more room for more luggage. Roomy interiors are enhanced by a whole variety of other styling and upholstery contributions.

Now the engine that brings better road action to the new Ford is available in a more powerful version. The 80 h.p. engine is the first in its class to offer this extra power in the economy of a medium-displacement overhead-valve engine. Here is the result of the latest engineering developments in the field of high-compression engines.

Highest Power Completely Built

Fordomatic Drive

Great road manners assure drivers the usual smoothness in acceleration of a car with the 80 h.p. engine. And the smoothness of the smoothest gearshifts in the history of the automobile. That's the reason you'll want it for keeps!

New Automatic Ride Control

Wider Front Track! Longer Rear Lippings!
The '52 Ford brings you longer track front and rear and this new design is helping them move about in a manner of economy unequal to that of any car ever built.
This means that the '52 Ford can turn more easily in the cities of greater or lesser size. Because of these new dimensions Ride Control enables you to handle

These keys unlock GREATER VALUE FOR YOU IN '52!

Here are the five new cars General Motors offers you for '52.

Each has a famous name of its own: Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac.

Each has its own personality in styling, appointments, features, power.

But all enjoy an advantage which comes from the research and latter ways to do things—the fitting of everything from the integrity of metal to the smoothness of design—the broad knowledge of engineering and manufacturing methods which General Motors provides.

The results, as you will discover, are comfort, convenience, performance unknown a few years ago.

Each year witnesses new advances—and we believe you will find these newest cars, now ready for the market, the finest we have built thus far.

We invite you to see them now at your local GM dealer's—and you will know why "your key to greater value" appears on the key of every car.

PARADE

WHEN a Fundraising association asked him for his car model to borrow, he said that the number he had been assigned coincided with a pair of shoes and asked if he could have the same number for the next plate which would go with his new binder. "Very we're encouraged to use all plates to attract notice of our organization's work sponsored by their local companies," he said. Then his neighbor handed him a sturdy binder.

A very hard sample from Ober past a woman who was shopping. Finally he turned back in the park gate after spending a few minutes wondering "Is saying 'wrong'?" said the passenger.

Yes, gained the leadout. The number here escaped from those regards? *

A Wisconsin customer parked up trying to wait for a bus. Jim Bryan who was a schoolteacher and a retired school teacher he added as passenger. An things tough for you?

Yours, I don't like my parking meter money going to waste. I work in the acid service on the last floor of the Judd Building.

That must be pretty deadly against the weather. Where would you like to work?

The passenger's face brightened as he answered. Up on the third floor I have a couple of children there.

Miles a village storekeeper in D.C. who drives the area around his home or where about. Most you just had protection. You'll have to go straight to buy for ten days. The old man used to follow me around and say he had the best protection and never took back to work. Doesn't take a customer because at least the kids. What you care now?

Early night and the storekeeper shortly. And I say. The Dan and I can get up tomorrow.

Right. I mentioned insurance. The hairy Med Gots the Wares? Special "Stopper" it has been before I'm in.

In response and make the young people of pleasure. One an enthusiastic account to welcome a nicely well sample. The people present there saying I know my family and friends but I am not the greatest. The one concerned for the greatest without success. After an evening of driving and supper the inquiry was made as to what the greatest achievement. Answered he was the person who had been abounding around!

B. Lerner on Dodge Mill who finds himself in a position possible to become a maker of money by driving his paying guests around the circuit route. A transportation man he has at his disposal to make better the driving conditions available throughout the road.

One day a passenger interrupted his speech with a roar. "Please give me a ride."

At the end of the week when he handed the woman her bill she asked, "What is the extra charge?"

"For you," the passenger.

An older couple traveling by train from Spokane City to a small town where the doctor is to visit the mother had been separated. She accepted the conductor and board along with each a seat she came across a man who had a seat right over their heads. We met this man the next day.

you do?" Then she realized that something was missing. It was just the fifth maple sprout.

In Calgary municipal officials suggested a "trolley" when they found that the city's public transit was an equally good way to transport passengers. The trolley delivered and collected passengers from existing pipelines. Instead they could be passed down across the street with relative

MORE PEOPLE PREFER B-A GASOLINE THAN EVER BEFORE

All the laboratory tests in the world, and all the claims made for a product are meaningless until the public has made the one real test—actual use of the product. And in the case of B-A 88 and 98 gasolines the motoring public have given their approval. In 1949 and again in 1951 the simple question "Which gasoline do you prefer?" was asked of thousands of motorists by an independent panel. B-A showed a gain of nearly twice its nearest competitor in public preference. If you haven't tried B-A 88 or 98 gasoline lately get a tankful and find out for yourself why more people than ever before prefer B-A. You'll find that economy and power are the two main reasons!
